HUNGKONG, MAY 23RD, 1878.

In our Police Reports of Wednesday, reference was made, in the case in which application had been made by the Chinese authorities for the rendition of a Chinaman charged with kidnapping, to a document Chinese penal code, put in as showing the law to do so because they have been decoyed and Chan-chit-lan, age 72, with another woman lose the prophe's eredit, so that there will not be existing in China upon the subject. This extract, of which we give, further on, the translation, as officially handed to the Bench, appears to be a section of the Chinese Penal Code, with such additions as to foreign ers compradores, and linguists as will make it act of decoying is completed, such offenders, applicable to modern times. Peru, Havana and other places, where Chinese labourers are in a modified degree deprived of their liberty, through contracts for labour for terms of five or more years, it is something in the consideration that if they are not free when they land, they were no more free when they shipped, as undoubtedly is the condition of the large majority of those who emigrate against their will. It is upon these unfortunate men that the means of decoying can be alone exerted with effect, and there seems but little doubt that it is to the fact that in one form or another the men are senting absolutely to declare three successive go when he was ready. > We received yesterday two editions of a very imposing printed paper, from which we gather that Mr. E. Norton was the successful competitor for the Ladies' Purse Handicap, which was competed for by the members of the Hongkong Rucquet Club about a fortnight ago, the purse, we understand, being presented by Miss Kennedy. We regret that we did not receive any intimation of the event in time to notice it at an earlier date.

We are informed that a day or two ago drunken sailor nearly fell over the apology for a parapet on the Praya, near the Parade Ground, and, but for timely assistance, would undoubtedly have been drowned. It is surprising that more accidents do not occur in this way, seeing that the parapet is in some places only a few inches high, and that in the most exposed parts there is scarcely any protection. The attention of the new Survey r-General ought to be specially called to this matter. There are also many dangerous parts of the roads in the Colony which-could be protected at a trifling expense.

The character of Mrs. Ormande in the first piece afforded a fine scope for Mrs. Lewis's exquisite dramatic abilities, and mot with hearty and repeated bursts of upplanee from the audience. Mrs. Bryer, as the young wife of the antiquated " Joylenf," proved herself a complete mistress of the situation. The other characters were well up to the mark, and "Gillyflower's" Latin quo ations would have done credit to a Legislative Conneillor. The burlesque went off, as pieces of that nature generally do, with comic dances, songs, bad puns, and roars of laughter. The performance as a whole seemed to give entire satisfaction.

A Literary and Scientific Institution, which has existed at Barnstaple for over thirty years, is peculiarly favoured. One of it earliest supporters was Mr. W. F. Rock, of Blackheathwho, for many years, has given £100 per annum for the free admission of 100 members, such members being thereby entitled to all the advantages the institution can offer-bas just retired from the presidency in consequence of advanced age, and is succeeded by Earl Fortescue, whose father was the first president. On his retirement, Mr. Rock signified to the council of the institution that, as he could not expect to live much longer, he had made arrangements, presumably by will, for the payment of £100 a year to the institution for ever, as heretofore, in order that the young men of Barnstaple, of whose town he is a native, may still enjoy the advantages to be reaped for a free connection with an institution of this class.

A BRAVE POLICEMAN. (Now York Times, March 29th.)

On Thursday afternoon a bullock, supposed to have jumped overboard from a cattle-boat, was discovered in the water opposite Pier No. 37. East River, and was taken out and brought to the Seventh Precinct Station by an officer and four bostmen. While being removed to a stable, the animal became infuriated, and broke away from his captors, passing Public School No. 31, in Monroe-street, just as the children were being dismissed and were coming out of the building. One boy was caught on the animal's borns and thrown up in the air, and in his descent was equalit by a citizen and escaped uninjured. Several other children were knocked down and trampled upon, without, however, receiving any serious injuries. Amid this scene of excitement Officer Gibson appeared, and literally, took the bull by the horns and held him until he was killed by a citizen who had come to the officer's wid. While in this danperous position the officer was repeatedly raised from the ground and shaken from-side to side. in the desperate officers of the muddened animal to release himself from the policeman's grasp, but the latter maintained his bold at great personal danger until the bull fell dead on the payment. By his gallant conduct the lives of many of the children were doubtless saved Capt. Mount reported the occurrence to the Board of Police Commissioners, and they adopted a resolution making honorable mention in the records of the Department of Patrolman Gibshu, and as a reward for his gallant conduct promoted him, to the rank of rounds-

A NEW BRUNSWICK HORROR A WIFE AND TWO CHILDREN CHOPPED TO

(From a Victoria, New Brunswick, Letter.) Pierre Lefebre, a Frenchman, who was last Spring arrested, but through some informality in the indistment was acquitted, on the charge of murder in the second degree against his youngest son, a bright-eyed fellow of seven years, has again convulsed the entire community with borror, and this time he has been auccessful. Pierre Lefebré, three years ago, was a well-to-do farmer, the owner of a fine and well cultivated tract of land, a good house, some live stock, and considerable other property. His | pany, are prepared to grant Marine risks at wife was the eldest daughter of Jucques Leblane, of Montreal, and both in social position and education was much the superior of her husband. She was gifted with a fine postic mind, and many of her better productions found their way into L'Ordre and La Mineres, newspapers of her natal city.

In his sober moments he has a kind, generous disposition, thoughtful in the extreme, and loving his wife and children with a love almost amounting to worship. He has been married about tifteen years, and has an interesting family-two boys, Paul and Emile, and one girl, Amy, agod five years. is only three years since that Pierre Lefebre commenced drinking to excess, and in that short time he was twice attempted the lives of his wife and children. His stock has almost dwindled down to nothing, his house and farm are heavily mortgaged, and desolution and want now occupy the place where contentment and luxury reigned but a few short years ago. One Monday he came home very much intoxicated. The room was cold and dark. No fire blazed on the hearth. His wife slopt. Emile and Amy lay on the floor locked in one another's arms; and the eldest son, Paul Lefebre, sat along at the foot of the bed in seeming unconscious slumber. The moon stole in as it pass. ed a cloud, and the husband comprehended in drunken stuper the abject scene as it present- kow, and are prepared to grant Insurances at ed itself in the moonlight for a moment. The fiends of hell seemed to have rushed into his brain in an instant. With a savage yell be seized an ake, brandishing it aloft in the sir, and in one swoop down it came on the poor head of Marie, his wife, crushing into her head, oleaying her skull in twain. A low mean followed, then all was still, the room was again dark, the moon hid behind a cloud, and a spirit sped toward its God. Muddened by blood, the monster groped his way toward Paul, who awoke-just in time to ward off a territie-blow from the descending weapon. But though the arm was for a time weakened, the work of death was not stayed. The buy fell with a gasp, bleeding to the earth. Emile and Amy shared the same fate, and then the incarnate fiend left the bloody scene of his beartless triumph over a sick woman and two defenceless children. The morning dawning found the bloody corpses aweltering in pools of blood. The neighbours, as usual, came in to offer their services to Madame Lefebre, or to bring in some delicacy for the neglected sufferer, and this was the horror that awaited them. The blood froze in their veins as the spectacle presented itself, and the heart sickened at the awful sight. Amy, who alone had escuped the savage butchery of her father, in tiny lips told the heartreading story of the murder, and her little sobs sent many a pang into the hearts of the horrified listeners. "NO SHIRKING."

I am speaking now of a period more than half a century past. In those days Scotland would have been a rich field for Father Mathew's labours. Habits of drunkenness were common alike to rich and poor. They were associated with good-fellowship, and were tenderly dealt with, even by the Church. The orgies of Osbaldistone Hall, graphically described in Rob Roy, found their counterpart in many a Scottish manor. The old bacchanalian rhyme,

"He who goes to bed, goes to bed sober, Fulls us the leaves do, and dies in October

But he that goes to bed, goes to bed mellow, Lives along, jolly life, and dies an honest fellow, was quoted, half in earnest, as anology for the excesses which wealthy and respectable hosts, under the guise of hospitality, literally forced upon their guests, when the cloth-was drawn and the ladies had abandoned the dimer-table to their riotous lords and masters. I have beard my father, more than once, relate what happened on such an occasion, when he was one of the actors. He had. been dining with a party of eight or ton. gentlemen and a few ladies, at the luxurious country-scat of a friend who had shown him much kindness. This engaged their host. As the fugitives looked back they saw him upset the dinner-table with a violent kick, drink that wine nobody else should. The deserters joined the ladies in the drawingroom, but the host did not reappear; and my father, as leading conspirator, lost, and nover regained, his friendship .- Atlantic Monthly.

NEW ZEALAND MAID-SERVANTS: The one great complaint made by the ladies who occupy these houses-the one sorrow, indeed, of the matrons of New Zealand - - arises from the dearth of maid-servants. Sometimes no domestic servant can be had at all, for love or money, and the mistress of the house with her daughters, if she have any, is constrained to cook the dinner and make the beds. Sometimes a lass who knows nothing will consent to come into a house and be taught how to do house-work at the being willing to devote time and ability to a rate of £40 per annum, with a special pro- subject which would secure a certain amount viso that she is to be allowed to go out two of literary immortality for his labour, and evenings a week to learn choral singing in the universal gratitude of his fellow-beings the music-hall.
